Relic of St. Camillus de Lellis

CROSSOVER is the quarterly news bulletin of the Camillian Disaster Service International. The name CROSSOVER was inspired by the gospel of Mark (Mk. 4,35-41) when Jesus invited his disciples to cross over to the other side of the lake, and then a massive storm battered their boat that it almost sank. Fear had overshadowed them; Jesus rose from sleep and calmed the sea. St. Camillus himself had crossed over the confines of the hospitals when he learned about the plague-stricken people, and the victims of floods, war, and pestilence. The enormous strength and enduring compassion of the Camillians are displayed during these difficult historical moments.

CONQUERED BY THE LOVE OF CHRIST: A CALL TO ECOLOGICAL CONVERSION

It was at San Giovanni Rotondo in the Valle dell'Inferno (Manfredonia), while Camillus was preparing to transport material provisions to the Capuchin convent in Manfredonia, Father Angelo accosted him with paternal and admonishing words that touched and made him reflect all night long. The next day (February 2, 1575), the feast of the Presentation of our Lord, as he descended towards Manfredonia along the valley of hell, his conscience was deeply troubled as if he was struck by lightning which threw him to the ground from his donkey. He beats his chest with a stone, asking God's forgiveness for his past life and resolving to do true penance.

Until that moment, he had let himself be guided by the impulses of his character and had always decided with his instinct and wants; the thought began to dawn on him that he needed God to make constructive decisions. Then, he exclaimed, "no more of the world, no more of the world," which means I don't want anymore to be guided by my instinct in search of true happiness. From now on, I will let the Holy Spirit completely inspires and reorients my life to its true purpose, its original design. It was a moment of recovery of the values which he had never nurtured and lived before.

The year 2025 is a special year for all of us believers and heralds of hope to those who are impacted by the climate crisis that brought about destruction of lives and properties and displacement of communities. The Catholic Church is celebrating its jubilee - 25 years after the Third Millennium of the Catholic church opened. As pilgrims of hope Pope Francis invites to conversion. "In the realization that all of us are pilgrims on this earth, which the Lord has charged us to till and keep (cf. Gen 2:15), may we never fail, in the course of our sojourn, to contemplate the beauty of creation and care for our common home. It is my hope that the coming Jubilee Year will be celebrated and experienced with this intention too. Growing numbers of men and women, including many young people and children, have come to realize that care for creation is an essential expression of our faith in God and our obedience to his will." (Letter of the Holy Father Francis for the Jubilee 2025)

The Camillians celebrate the 450th anniversary of the Conversion of their founder and initiator of the "new school of charity", St. Camillus de Lellis. In this jubilee, we are reminded of the transformative power of a change of heart and the profound impact it can have on our lives and the world around us.

St. Camillus' conversion from a disoriented life to one of compassion and selfless service serves as an inspiring example for all who believe in the transforming power of the mercy of God. This jubilee, let us delve deeper into the significance of his conversion and draw lessons that will guide common mission of caring for our "common home" in the spirit of ecological conversion.

Pope Francis calls our attention to the truth of climate crisis. “[...] it is indubitable that the impact of climate change will increasingly prejudice the lives and families of many persons. We will feel its effects in the areas of healthcare, sources of employment, access to resources, housing, forced migrations, etc.” (Laudate Deum, 2). All of these bring serious and at times irreversible impact to the integral health of the planet and its inhabitants.

In the spirit of St. Camillus, who turned away from his former way of life to embrace a life of love and care for those in need and suffering because of our conscious denial to the truth of interconnectedness of creation, let us consider how we too can turn away from practices that harm our environment and embrace a more sustainable and ecologically responsible way of living.

Ecological conversion calls us to recognize the interconnectedness of all creation, God’s immense gift to humanity, and to adopt lifestyles that promote environmental stewardship and justice. St. Camillus, through his commitment to the sick and suffering, exemplifies the essence of caring for not just individuals but for the well-being of the entire community and the world.

As we engage this journey towards transformation of one’s heart received and lived by St. Camillus de Lellis, let us reflect on ways we can contribute to the healing of our wounded planet. Whether through eco-resilience community building projects, sustainable practices in our healthcare missions, responsible use of resources, or advocacy for environmental justice, each one of us has a role to play in fostering integral health and planetary well-being.

May this Jubilee be a catalyst for our personal and collective ecological and integral health conversion, inspiring us to live in harmony with creation and work towards a more sustainable, compassionate, and healthy world.

Wishing you all a blessed journey inspired by the Conversion of St. Camillus de Lellis!

ONWARDS IN BUILDING AN ECON-RESILIENT COMMUNITY: CADIS 2024 ACCOMPLISHMENT REPORT

Vision & Mission:

CADIS aims to create ecologically converted (eCon) and resilient communities, believing that disaster-affected vulnerable communities must be engaged in ecological conversion and resilience building to achieve development, protection, and integral well-being. They target communities vulnerable to social, physical, economic, political, and environmental risks, empowering them to overcome obstacles and lessen the impact of disasters. This involves ecological consciousness, utilizing community assets for resilience, and achieving integral development.

Strategies (2024-2028):

1. Mainstreaming: Integrating CADIS work within the Camillian ministry.
2. Niching: Establishing CADIS presence within Camillian Provinces and Delegations, aiming for legal recognition.
3. Diversification: Expanding funding sources beyond Europe, nurturing partnerships, and promoting mutual aid.
4. Capacity Development: Tailored training for CADIS members and volunteers, addressing local needs and cultural contexts.
5. Systematization: Formalizing CADIS programs through partnerships with public, private, and faith-based organizations.

2024 Achievements:

- Mainstreaming & Niching: CADIS operates in 19 countries across Asia-Pacific, Africa, America, and Europe (out of the Camillian Order's presence in 38 countries). Five have legal CADIS recognition, with others actively participating in local emergency responses.
- Resource Mobilization: Funding sources have diversified beyond Europe, including Taiwan, Australia, and the USA. A significant achievement is securing funding from the Italian government (IRPEF 8xmille) for a project in Kenya. However, individual donor growth remains constant. Grant writing remains the primary funding source.
- Capacity Building: 8 members earned a diploma in Integral Ecology, 22 participated in resource mobilization training, and 38 attended the annual leadership conference. A resource mobilization workshop is planned for 2025 in Cebu City.
- Systematization: Partnerships established with the Italian government (Presidency of the Council of Ministries), the Buddhist Tzu Chi Charity Foundation (BTCCF), and the Bishop Conference of Italy (CEI). A volunteer management program is in place.

Projects:

- CADIS responded to 11 emergencies and implemented resilience-building interventions in Asia-Pacific, Africa, and Europe, assisting 5,850 families with food, shelter, cash transfers, medical care, psychosocial support, and job placement. Locations include India, Thailand, the Philippines, Kenya, Tanzania, and Poland (Ukrainian refugees).
- The "The Letter" documentary film tour continued in Italy, raising awareness about environmental issues and soliciting support.

2025 Plans:

- Major resilience-building projects are planned in Poland (phase four of Ukrainian refugee integration, focusing on job opportunities and housing) and Kenya (focusing on food security and climate resilience, funded by Italian government funds).
- Resilience-building projects in the Philippines (Cebu City urban poor) and India (Manipur ethnic clash victims) will focus on mental health.

Challenges:

- RUNTS (Single National Third Sector Register) registration opportunity under evaluation. Pending clarification on EU fiscal norms.
- AICS (Italian Agency for Development Cooperation) registration to be taken over and finalised due to missing requirements.
- Overhauling the CADIS Facebook page to improve crowdfunding potential and tools.

- 2026: US Mission Appeal.

CADIS CONFERENCE IN CEBU, PHILIPPINES, "RESILIENCE IN ACTION: BUILDING A COLLABORATIVE FUTURE"

Insights from the resource mobilization Asia-Pacific Conference

CADIS International and its local partner, CTF Philippines, work tirelessly in disaster-prone regions like the Philippines, providing emergency relief and fostering long-term resilience through various projects. While emergency response remains crucial, building community resilience is equally important for sustainable impact.

To sensitize volunteers and expand the pool of supporters in the Asia-Pacific area about CADIS activities, 24 participants from the Asia-Pacific region gathered together in Cebu City, Philippines, from March 17 to 20 for an immersive experience, fostering deeper understanding, building stronger relationships, and securing greater support for CADIS resilience-building initiatives.

CADIS leaders from the Philippines, India, Taiwan, Thailand, Australia, US, and Italy, along with selected participants, explored issues related to building resilience, the importance of the role of volunteers, and communication strategies to engage as many supporters as possible.

The Philippines is one of the most prone-disaster countries in the world. Several interventions have been implemented and completed by CADIS International, CTF Philippines and other actors. But this is not enough. We need to improve the capacities and knowledge of the population to be resilient in order to face natural calamities and disasters. The workshop and immersion program were held in Cebu City, Central Visayas region of the Philippines. CADIS has an ongoing project in Cebu with the urban communities at risk of fire and other disasters. The participants visited the area of the project to meet and greet the women beneficiaries and listen to their testimonies on what impact the project has on their lives and their local communities.

During the first day, a session on 'The Power of Resilience: Personal and Community Strategies' by CADIS International Director, Fr. Aris Miranda, MI, opened the conference. Through a review of the most recent 2023 studies conducted by EM-DAT (Emergency Events Database), the area of the world most affected by natural disasters is Asia, and the Philippines ranks first among the 15 countries in the world at the highest risk of natural and other disasters. The participants shared their best practices and experiences during the training sessions and workshops. It was a moment for sharing personal experiences and finding new synergies for the future. CADIS International believed that - 'If the poor and disaster-vulnerable communities that CADIS is assisting are transformed into empowered and eCon-resilient communities, then development in these communities will occur'. (Theory of Change)

In the afternoon session, the various CADIS Thailand, CADIS Australia, CADIS Taiwan, CTF India and CTF Philippines shared their best practices of resource mobilisation and completed and ongoing activities. To conclude, an interesting contribution from the United States sharing the new frontiers of fundraising. At the end of the first day's work, it was officially announced the launching of the contest to celebrate the tenth anniversary of CADIS Foundation.

After the inspiring first day dedicated to the different CADIS and CTF realities in the Asia-Pacific region, participants had the opportunity to get involved through a series of workshops and role plays.

Fr. Siby Khaitaran, CTF India, facilitated the session on 'The Backbone of CADIS: The Role of Volunteers, Involvement and Donor Management' by sharing their established experience on volunteer recruitment.

Then, Fr. Mars Digal of CADIS Taiwan, introduced another focal and indispensable topic for non-profit organisations: 'Networking and collaborative fundraising strategies specific to CADIS's mission'. Fundraising is always a complex topic that needs attention, resources and systems.

Finally, Fr. Michael Gimena, of CADIS Australia, brought to the attention of the participants the topic of 'Organising CADIS Ambassadors'. This is a new opportunity for CADIS which, thanks to the positive experience of Australia, can become systematic in spreading CADIS' vision, mission and values around the world as much as possible. In this regard, the two CADIS Australia ambassadors who actively participated in the organised activities spoke.

Chymbeelyn de Pasion and Ma. Sofia Valdez, respectively ranked first and second in the 'Faces of Australia Queensland' competition, shared their experience which led them to get in touch with CADIS Australia and become its official ambassadors, with the aim of making a new segment of the population aware of the emergencies of our times.

The third and last day of the CADIS Asia-Pacific Conference was a full immersion in the projects. The participants had the opportunity to see the places and listen to the stories of the beneficiaries of the project “Promoting Disaster Resilient Communities in Cebu”.

The project, funded by CEI, and in collaboration with the local partner VPHCS, reached the second year of implementation. A lot has been accomplished in two years but there are still some needs to be improved.

The first barangay visited is called Nangkaville where the Nangkaville women’s association has been organized. In this place, located on the hills of Cebu City, live more than 300 households. They were forced to move from the city because of forced eviction by the city government. Some of the families were coming from a settlement razed by fire. The project helped them to have more self-esteem and enhance their skills. Despite significant improvements, mental health is a critical issue. Many women suffer from anxiety and depression because it is difficult to sustain such a precarious family and economic situation. At the same time, worrying for other alternative sources of income.

In the afternoon, the visit continued in the Inayawan barangay where the Tierra Dulce women’s association warmly welcomed the participants with singing and dancing.

Here the women organised themselves with the production of health and hygiene products such as natural oils, herbal cream and handmade candles. Although the economic and housing situation are improving significantly, there are still activities that can be implemented to further strengthen the resilience of the community.

Emotionally engaged by the stories of the women who shared their successes but also their insecurities, the participants had the unique opportunity to hear these stories from the direct beneficiaries. It was certainly a moving experience, but one that animated the will to continue resilience and capacity-building programmes.

A CHARITY CONCERT FOR VALENCIA AND THE ESTABLISHMENT OF CADIS SPAIN

Camillian religious from Barcelona organized the event to raise awareness and support the victims of Valencia flood

On Saturday 15 March, the parish of San Cayetano de los Teatinos hosted the charity concert 'Music for Relief', a moment of deep communion and brotherhood. The initiative was promoted by the Camillian religious from Barcelona, with Father Mathew Biju at the helm, and CADIS (Camillian Disaster Services).

José Carlos Bermejo, Provincial Superior of the Camillian religious of Spain, opened the event with a warm welcome, explaining the history and mission of the Order.

Consuelo Santamaría, lecturer at the Centro de Humanización de la Salud and member of the Board of Directors of CADIS International, presented the activities of CADIS around the world, highlighting the organisation's commitment to the most vulnerable in emergency situations.

The highlight of the evening was the two-hour concert, an intense and enthralling musical experience. Manoj George, accompanied by his children Neil Manoj and Niya Rose Manoj, and singer Barbara Kejetanomicz, enchanted the audience with his virtuosity. Father Mathew Biju enriched the event with some flute pieces.

The evening ended with thanks from Father Mathew Biju and the presentation of an award to the artists by Brother José Ignacio Santaolalla, President of CADIS, for their contribution to the cause and support for the DANA victims.

The DANA flood, an acronym for 'Depresión Aislada en Niveles Altos' (Isolated Depression in High Levels), which hit Valencia and other parts of Spain at the end of October 2024, was characterised by extremely heavy rainfall, with accumulations of hundreds of millimetres in a few hours. The flooding caused a high death toll of more than 200 people, as well as extensive damage to infrastructure, homes and businesses. The population showed great solidarity, with many citizens mobilising to help the affected communities. Numerous volunteers were involved in rescue operations and debris removal. However, there has been no shortage of social protest due to the perceived inadequacy of the relief effort. Experts indicate that extreme weather events like this could become more frequent due to climate change.

CADIS has recently established its presence in Spain. The primary objective will be to expand our humanitarian activities and psychosocial intervention programs for people who are suffering due to calamities. The organization's initial focus will be on building awareness, recruiting volunteers, and raising funds to support its ongoing and future initiatives.

Music has been selected as the inaugural initiative, leveraging its universal appeal to connect with the Spanish community. The concert marked a good first attempt to bring international cross-cultural music to the people of Barcelona and to use the opportunity to spread awareness about CADIS.

Current Activities

Valencia Psychosocial Intervention:

CADIS is currently in the initial stages of providing psychosocial support to the migrant community in Valencia affected by recent floods. This intervention aims to address the emotional and mental well-being of individuals particularly from displaced communities severely impacted by the disaster. These communities have been marginalized and largely excluded from mainstream support provided by governmental initiatives.

Barcelona Program Development:

A key objective is to build a base of volunteers and to establish a channel for psychosocial interventions through providers based out of Barcelona. This initiative is designed to:

- Motivate individuals to learn and participate in providing psychosocial support.
- Expand the reach of CADIS's programs within Spain.

Fundraising Initiatives:

Concurrent with program development, CADIS is actively pursuing fundraising initiatives in Barcelona. These efforts are crucial for sustaining current operations and enabling future expansion.

Strategic Intentions

Awareness Campaign:

Utilizing music as a primary tool, CADIS aims to raise awareness about its mission and the importance of psychosocial intervention within the displaced and migrant communities in Spain who are excluded from mainstream support.

Volunteer Recruitment:

The organization is actively seeking volunteers to support its programs in both Valencia and Barcelona. This includes individuals with expertise in psychosocial support, as well as those willing to assist with logistical and fundraising efforts.

Fundraising:

Continuous fundraising is essential to ensure the sustainability of CADIS's programs. This includes exploring diverse funding sources and engaging with local donors and organizations.

Psychosocial Intervention Expansion:

The goal is to grow the psychosocial intervention programs throughout Spain, starting with the establishment of the program in Barcelona.

Future Considerations:

- Develop strong relationships with local organizations and community leaders.
- Explore opportunities for collaboration with universities and educational institutions.
- Implement a comprehensive communication strategy to enhance public awareness.
- Develop clear volunteer training programs.

Conclusion

CADIS's initial step in Spain demonstrates a strong commitment to providing essential psychosocial support to vulnerable communities. By leveraging music as a unifying force and focusing on strategic fundraising and volunteer recruitment, CADIS is poised to make a significant positive impact in the region.

PROJECTS

CADIS ADVANCES ITS COMMUNITY RESILIENCE BUILDING PROJECT IN THE URBAN AREAS OF THE ISLAND OF CEBU

Report of the second year of CADIS and VPHCS project in the slums of Cebu City, Philippines

This report presents the progress and achievements of the second year of the "Building Disaster Resilient Communities in Informal Settlements in Cebu City, Philippines" project.

Building on the foundation established in the first year, the project continues to focus on strengthening community-based disaster management strategies, enhancing primary health care services, and promoting food security in the four informal settlements of Cebu City.

The project's multifaceted approach has yielded significant positive impacts, including enhanced disaster preparedness, improved health outcomes, increased community ownership, and greater economic self-reliance. The project has also fostered a strong sense of community and empowered residents to take charge of their development.

Activities undertaken

1. Community-Based Disaster Management

The project facilitated regular meetings with people's organizations to actively discuss disaster preparedness strategies and address emerging challenges like the critical issue of waste management. In response, the residents organized regular clean-up drives to prevent clogged drainage systems and the associated health and safety risks.

In addition to the regular meetings, the project organized fire safety seminars and fire drills in collaboration with the Cebu City Fire Station. The seminars covered the basics of fire behavior, common causes of fires in urban poor settlements, and effective fire prevention strategies.

2. Primary Health Care Services

Community health workers (CHWs) play a central role in delivering essential health care services. The CHWs actively applied the skills and knowledge they gained during previous training sessions.

They provided a range of services, including blood pressure monitoring, weight checks, treatment of cough in children, and the preparation of herbal remedies such as lagundi syrup for cough and herbal liniments for various ailments, increasing access to affordable health care options. They also offered ventusa or cupping therapy for back pain, a common complaint among residents engaged in physically demanding work. The CHWs conducted informal discussions on common illnesses, increasing health literacy within the community.

3. Food Security and Economic Empowerment

One notable example of community-driven initiative was the feeding program established by the Sitio Lawis Pasil Women's Association. In every feeding held during their monthly meetings, mothers contributed small amounts of rice and money to purchase a chicken, which they then used to prepare a nutritious rice porridge for the children. This simple yet impactful activity not only addressed nutritional needs but also strengthened community bonds and provided a platform for mothers to support each other.

The training empowered the community members to identify and leverage their existing resources and strengths to create sustainable livelihood opportunities. The training included workshops where participants brainstormed ideas, shared knowledge, and pooled resources.

4. Collaboration with the Church

Recognizing the important role of faith-based institutions in community development and disaster relief, the project leaders initiated collaborations with local churches. The parish priests expressed their commitment to assist in disaster relief efforts, highlighting the church's capacity to provide shelter, resources, and spiritual support to affected communities in times of need.

5. Collaboration with the Barangay Councils

The project placed a strong emphasis on collaboration with local government units (LGUs), particularly the barangay councils. This collaboration was deemed essential for the sustainability of the project's initiatives beyond its termination. By working closely with barangay officials, the project ensured that its activities were aligned with local development priorities and that the communities would continue to receive support from their LGUs.

6. Laudato Si' Seminars and Walk for Creation

To promote environmental awareness and action, the project organized seminars on the Laudato Si' Action Platform. These seminars, held in conjunction with Laudato Si' Week, brought together women's associations from the four project sites. The screening of the film "The Letter" further emphasized the urgent need for environmental stewardship and the interconnectedness of all creation. The seminars concluded with pledges from the participants to become agents of change and contribute to a more sustainable future.

Despite the challenges inherent in community development work, the project has demonstrated the transformative potential of participatory approaches and multi-sectoral partnerships. By fostering community ownership, promoting collaboration, and addressing key challenges, the project has laid the groundwork for continued progress and sustainable development in the four informal settlements. As the project moves forward, it will continue to prioritize community engagement, capacity building, and adaptability to ensure that its positive impacts endure.

To ensure the project's positive impacts endure beyond its designated timeframe, a comprehensive plan for continued community-driven activities will be implemented for the remaining part of the project. This plan focuses on empowering the people's organizations to sustain the initiatives that have proven successful.
